I received final word from Steve a few minutes ago, and we have implemented the links:

- Home page (footer)
- FOIA home page (epa.gov/foia)
- 404 page not found (epa.gov/pigglywiggly to see it)

All are operational and visible from my personal iPhone.

The search index is rebuilding with reasonable speed. A search of the snapshot for “climate change” has 400 results now.

We will monitor search indexing closely and advise everyone of its status late today and tomorrow morning.

Matt,

We have not yet added the links to the snapshot. Once we add the links, the search engines will start finding the snapshot. Should we move forward or wait for the final word from Steve?

Steve is going to double check but my sense is that it would be better to get it up there now and if word is to pull the site down we can then do so.

I am having Peter Buch mock up a note that will appear on the search results page itself. At the top of the (all too short for the moment) search results list.)

I will be able to show this shortly.

Steve and I discussed, my sense is we are going with option B but Steve is going to verify this.

Lin please work with OPA/OGC on a draft note to explain the search issue and also have John write a brief summary of what happened.

Subject: Technical Glitch with the Snapshot

Hi Steve,

The snapshot site is up and publicly accessible, but our testing revealed a major problem with the Search Index. We're rebuilding the index now, but it will take about 12 – 36 hours to complete. In the meantime, search results on the snapshot will be incomplete.

I recommend we either (a) take the site down until the index is ready or (b) add a note to the site explaining that the search indexing is incomplete. Let us know how you'd like to proceed.
